

Anthologies

Summary: This document will outline details about the Anthologies update to eReserve Plus for the Book resource genre type

Introduction

An anthology is a compilation or collection of work by different authors, chosen by the compiler and published as one book. It may also be referred to as an edited book. When managing resources for communication to students, anthologies present a particular problem, as the work in each chapter, is often authored by a person or persons other than the book editor(s). This may give rise to author attribution, i.e. when the work in a chapter is attributed to the editor(s) of the book and not the author(s) of the chapter. The anthologies update to eReserve Plus, allows Librarians and Faculty members to specify whether a Book resource is an edited work or anthology.

Faculty Interface

When creating a new Book resource via the Learning Management System, faculty members will be presented with a mandatory field for anthologies named Edited volume or anthology. This field is by default set to No which indicates the authors need to be supplied for the Source Document.

i Instructions

You've chosen to request the creation of a reading from a Book. This is intended for excerpts from books which can be a couple of pages, a whole chapter or a whole book. To complete this form, fill in the required fields with the most accurate information available then click on the submit button and your request will be created. (NB: if you choose to provide a file then it will need to be reviewed by Copyright Staff prior to release to your students.)

Before creating a NEW record, you should check to see if the Reading already exists in eReserve Plus or another connected repository using Find an existing reading.

Library Interface

The Edited volume or anthology field in all three interfaces will default to No requiring the population of the Author field on the Book (i.e. the source document). If the librarian chooses Yes then the Author(s) field will be hidden on the Book and no longer required. However, when completing the Reading form the Author(s) field for the Reading will be required when Yes is chosen
